Introductory Hearing of Jamendo SA in the Case Against Nvidia

Jamendo SA, a Luxembourg-based company specializing in providing music licences for commercial and professional uses, and a subsidiary of Winamp Group SA (ISIN: BE0974334667, Ticker: ALWIN), wishes to provide information regarding the legal proceedings initiated against Nvidia concerning the unauthorized use of its music catalogue.

Jamendo found that more than 55,000 tracks from its catalogue had been used without authorization to train an artificial intelligence tool. The commercial damage resulting from this use has been assessed at approximately 16 million euros. This estimate does not cover potential moral damages related to the unlawful use of the works.

An introductory hearing took place on 20 November 2025, after which the court scheduled the next step in the proceedings for 26 March 2026, when the parties will be heard again.

Jamendo will continue the proceedings in compliance with the applicable legislation and will keep defending the interests of the artists and creators whose works it protects.
